Eakins will devote time to local issues

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

John Eakins plans to catch up on his sleep now that he no longer has ministerial duties to perform. Once rested, the Victoria/Haliburton MPP then looks forward to being able to spend more time in the riding.

"I've been waiting for this for a long time. One never realizes how tired you are until you have a chance to rest your bones," Eakins said in a telephone interview.

Last week, Premier David Peterson had a cabinet shuffle and Eakins lost his post of Minister of Municipal Affairs. Previously he was Minister of Tourism and Recreation, and has been an MPP since 1975. Eakins said that when he became municipal minister two years ago, he and Peterson talked about it being a temporary position.

"We'll all still have a part to play but when you have a 94-member caucus, there's a lot of talent there and they should be given the opportunity to serve," Eakins said of the role he and the other displaced ministers will serve.

"I feel good about the whole thing... and you have to consider your own personal life," he added, not wanting to comment on whether

Peterson will give him a board chairmanship or some siliar perk in the future. "There will be some interesting challenges down the road—they aren't over yet."

In his term of municipal affairs minister, Eakins said he was able to achieve a lot of things he's very proud of. Metro Toronto Council now has direct elections, municipal councillors must reveal campaign contributions which now have limits attached, the city of Sarnia will be expanded and the province has embarked on a major restructuring of county government.

While Eakins had other goals, he said that when you're in government, you realize how long it takes to change things. "You become very ambitious. You have lots of things you want to do but you have to put it in context of what's good for the entire government and province. Everything works very slowly and for any minister the frustrating thing is not being able to plow through with your ideas."

When asked whether his voice on local concerns will be weakened now that he doesn't hold a cabinet position, Eakins said he'll now have more time to devote to resolving problems, such as the delay to the Haliburton Hospital expansion and water levels. "I'll have more time to concentrate on what needs to be done."

Man sought for sexual assault

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

The OPP is looking for a man who propositioned a seven-year-old child in the washrooms at Rotary Beach in Haliburton.

On the afternoon of July 31, the child went into the public washroom. The man was waiting in the washroom and touched and propositioned the child. The child said no, ran out of the washroom and told an adult what had happened, says Const. Brian Sachs.

The man is described as in his early twenties with sandy blond hair, wavy or curly on the sides and short on top, and reasonably well kept.

Const. Sachs says the child's reaction "was the best thing to do. Kids now know enough to step forward and say something."

After the incident, the child was reassured that the strange man was to blame for the incident and the child had done nothing wrong to provoke the man's behaviour.

The police are treating the incident as a sexual assault and the investigation is continuing.

Local ambulance officers join provincial protest

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

Haliburton ambulance officers are joining a province-wide protest action to demand changes in the way provincial ambulance services are run.

They are angered over underfunding of the ambulance service, the lack of paramedic training and equipment and safety problems. Between August 8-14 the officers will be wearing union (Ontario Public Service Employees Union) baseball caps on the job, and hold information pickets to draw public attention to their concerns.

"We are unhappy with the way the ambulance service is being treated by the province of Ontario," says Bob English, acting unit steward for the ambulance officers.

In particular, the ambulance officers would like to see steps taken to correct the slow response times.

"If your heart is failing or your child is hurt, you need help. Fast," says English.

"In Haliburton it takes an ambulance and average of 15.5 minutes to respond to emergencies. An independent study last year concluded it took 12 minutes, on average, for ambulances outside Toronto to respond to emergencies. In some communities and particularly cottage country, it takes up to 40 minutes.

"In Toronto, it takes only about 6.5 minutes.

"Ambulance officers are dedicated health professionals. They want to provide the best service possible. They believe the public is entitled to expect fast responses, less than five minutes, and excellent service with fully qualified paramedics.

"Instead, the public gets uneven service: fast response times and paramedics in some parts of the province; slower response times and no paramedics in other parts. The result is a patchwork quilt, with poor service in smaller communities and rural areas."

Ambulance attendants can upgrade to paramedic status by taking a course, but English says the money for the program is being given to the urban areas, where paramedics are not as badly needed. He says paramedics are vital here because it takes longer to reach a hospital or trauma centre. The paramedics are able to perform a wider variety of life-saving procedures (Advanced Life Support as

After a short parade from the municipal dock and along the main street, worshippers carry the Sesquicentennial Cross into St. Paul's Anglican Church in Minden on Sunday. This was the first local stop for the cross, which is touring the each parish in the Toronto Diocese.

Sesquicentennial cross sails across the waters to Minden

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

The cross was barely discernable as the boat made its way up the Gull River. Under the bridge they came, met by women in long-flowing gowns, worshippers in their Sunday best and a priest who would later reflect on the message carried by the cross.

This was the first stop the six-foot high wooden cross would make in the Highlands. Part of the Diocese of Toronto's Sesquicentennial Celebration, it's slowly making its way from parish to parish throughout the province. On Sunday, St. Paul's Anglican Church welcomed it to Minden and held a special service in its honour.

Bringing the cross to the Highlands were Kim and Kevin Sharpe, great, great grandchildren of J.H. Delamere, one of Minden's first settlers. As well, their father is

Rev. Tim Sharpe, who's been helping with the summer services in Minden since 1932.

They picked up the cross at St. Thomas's on Balsam Lake and after keeping it over night at their cottage on Gull Lake, arrived at the municipal dock in Minden shortly after 10 Sunday morning.

From here, about 40 worshippers carried it in a short parade along Main Street, with a banner leading the procession, followed by Father Parker, the cross, carried by alternating celebrants, Earl Cooper on the bagpipes and the rest of the crowd, some of which also carried banners.

On Monday, the cross journeyed to St. Stephen's on Boshkung Lake for a contemporary evensong. St. Peter's Maple Lake received it on Tuesday and celebrated with a holy Eucharist service and a pot luck dinner. Today (Wednesday) Harry Randall is taking it by boat across Grass Lake to St. Andrew's in West Guilford, where a service of worship will be held at 7 p.m., followed by refreshments.

St. George's will welcome it at the Rotary Beach on Thursday night at 6:30 and will parade it through Head Lake Park to the church. Accompanying it will be the choir dressed in period costumes and singing hymns of the 19th century. Evensong will begin at 7 p.m.

Next in line is St. Margaret's in Wilberforce, where it will be carried through town by hay wagon on Friday. A pot luck dinner will follow the procession.

The last church in the county to receive the cross will be St. John's in Irondale. A special service will be held, with refreshments following.

On October 15, the cross will end its journey at the SkyDome in Toronto, joined by a 3,000-member choir and 30,000 worshippers. One hundred and fifty bishops from around the world are also expected.

MNR issues permits after rain, humidity

by ANNE HEWITT

Last Saturday's rain, combined with high levels of humidity and low winds has cleared the way for the Ministry of Natural Resources to start issuing fire permits again.

A restrictive fire zone had been in place for over a week as extremely opposed to Basic Life Support), including defibrillation and heart monitoring, and IV therapy.

The local ambulance officers would like to see Haliburton as a "project area for paramedics", but funding for the program is not forthcoming.

"Our hands are tied," says English. "We would like to provide this service, but the government is holding us back. We are appealing to the public (to write the local MPP asking what is being done to improve service).

"Why should people be treated differently in the city than when they come to their cottages in Haliburton. Where would they rather have their accident. On the Don Valley Parkway or on Highway 121?"

dry conditions posed a serious threat. More than 200 fires were burning in the province last week, including a large blaze near Parry Sound.

The number of fires in the region has dropped to five, all of which are under control. There are none burning in the Minden district or in Algonquin Park.

There is still no burning between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. However contained fires are allowed for cooking and warmth. The Senior Fire Technician for the MNR's fire centre, Dave Brown, says if there is a little more rainfall over the next few days the ban will not need to be put in place again.

However, at the moment there is still a threat from the scattered lightning which has been occurring off and on, says Brown, who has been sending up detection flights regularly. Fires could be smouldering undetected inside a tree, and if there are some good drying days, they could escalate.

Two charges were laid while the restricted fire zoning was in place. "In both cases the people knew they weren't allowed to burn, but they thought they'd try it anyway," says Brown. However, he adds that people are becoming more aware of the problem, and are more supportive and willing to help.

Life-saving equipment for Haliburton County's Ambulance Services will be purchased with a recent $900 personal donation from Gerry Irish.

Haliburton's ambulance base will use the set of Medical Anti-Shock Trousers (also known as MAST pants) in combatting hypovolemic shock for critical care patients in transport, says manager Rob Luke.

The pants act as an absorbant and help keep blood from pooling in the lower extremities, allowing the blood to be kept in more vital upper organs such as the brain, heart and lungs.

Irish learned about the MAST pants from his nephew Larry Blanchard, one of the area attendants. Minden's base already has a set, and Blanchard was discussing the need for a set at the Haliburton base.

"I wanted to do something for this community, and something for the ambulance service, so I figured this was it," says Irish, who recently retired as vice-principal of J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School and now owns the Silver

Area lakes not healthy for trout:MNR

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

After completing water quality surveys in the municipality of Anson, Hindon and Minden and Lutterworth Township, the Ministry of the Environment has discovered that some lakes don't meet provincial standards for a healthy trout population.

Nine lakes in AHM were tested by the ministry to determine the amount of phosphorus loading each could handle as a result of shoreline development, according to a letter from MOE co-ordinator Malcolm G. Foy presented at council meetings for both municipalities.

Water bodies which don't meet provincial standards for dissolved oxygen are Anson Lake, Canning Lake, the north basin of Kashagawigamog Lake (located in Dysart) and Little Boshkung Lake.

Horseshoe Lake is possibly below standards and will be re-sampled this year. Falling within MOE standards are Bob Lake, the south basin of Kashagawigamog Lake (in Minden), Mountain, Soyers and Twelve Mile Lakes.

Lakes tested in Lutterworth fared a little better. Gull, Little Bob, Lutterworth, North Pigeon, Moore, Davis and Sheldon were tested, and results say the last three are possibly below standards.

The ministry will review all development proposals around the lakes "in light of their potential implications for water quality."

The municipality may have to provide recent shoreline development information before the MOE will report on possible hazards to water quality of a development proposal.

could increase phosphorus loading around the lakes will be objected to by the ministry.

The Muskoka-Haliburton District office has been notified, and a request has been made to give these lakes priority for consideration for the Cottage Pollution Control Program.

"This approach represents an interim measure to provide a high degree of protection for water quality in these lake trout lakes until such time as there is an overall provincial policy for lakeshore development applicable to all lakes in the province."

A provincial policy on lakeshore development is currently being developed by the Inland Lakes Unit at the Dorset MOE Research Centre.

Lutterworth man says action needed to fight Gypsy Moth

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

Lou Cataford is angry. His half-acre Gull Lake area property is infested with Gypsy Moths, the trees are being defoliated and he doesn't know where to turn for help.

He has already approached Lutterworth Township with the problem, and had the county's Forest Management Committee chairman, Don Shortreed, visit the property along with Lutterworth Reeve Carol Puffer, Deputy Reeve Jim McMahon and representatives from the Ministry of Natural Resources. Shortreed has said he's collecting information for next month's county council meeting. But Cataford is worried any action taken will be too late to combat the growing infestation.

"The Gypsy Moth is a deadly little beast," he told Lutterworth council at last Tuesday's meeting.

The large adult females, which are white with black markings, are now laying eggs in masses on area trees. Covered by buff-coloured hairs, they resemble small pieces of chamois on the tree trunks, undersides of branches, under loose bark and in tree cavities.

Hundreds of tiny caterpillars will hatch from the eggs in May, and by mid-summer they will be fully grown, about 6-7 cm long, dark and hairy. Gypsy Moth caterpillars feed on the foliage of most trees, with repeated heavy infestations leaving trees weak and vulnerable to other pests and disease.

The spray used to combat the Gypsy Moth (as well as the Forest Tent caterpillar) is Bt (Bacillus thuringiensis), a bacterium which occurs naturally in our environment. But any spraying must be done by private landowners.

"I went to the MNR and got a few of their pamphlets," said Cataford. "I came to them for help and came to the conclusion that they're going to look after their valued forests, not the private land owner's trees."

Unhappy with the ministry's information pamphlets, which state the Gypsy Moth caterpillar feasts mainly on oak trees ("they're all over my lot on all the trees—they would eat anything"), Cataford told council the battle can't be fought by one man.

McMahon tried to assure Cataford that Shortreed is on top of the problem, and "will follow through to see what financial funding is available." The deputy reeve promised to keep Cataford aware of any progress by the county. "The main thing now is to get the wheels in motion," he said.

Despite the fact that a spray program wouldn't be done until next spring, Cataford wants action before autumn to make sure cottagers are included in any proposals.

To initiate a spray program, Cataford says he has contacted area property owners. By Tuesday, at least 80 people from Moore's Falls to Gull Lake said they'd help to fight against the infestation. "All these people are willing to dig into their pockets to pay for chemicals for spraying." To his disappointment, however, only one showed up at the council meeting.

'There's absolutely no question it's a serious problem. My trees are stripped. It looks like devastation.'

The reeve suggested that Cataford contact the Gull Lake Cottager's Association about the spraying proposal. Puffer talked to president Peter Elmslie about the growing problem at the association's last meeting and was told the group has set aside funds to spray. "Good communication should be kept with the cottager's association because they have numbers, and dollars too," she said.

Cataford was hoping council would back him with the spray proposal, helping to contact people and collect money to pay for the program. Since Haliburton relies on beautiful scenery to support its tourism and recreation industry, the county should stand behind any action to help preserve this, he said.

"There's absolutely no question that it's a serious problem. My trees are stripped. It looks like devastation."

But councillor Lisa Mercer said she believes neither the township nor the county should get involved. "It's private property and I don't feel we can collect private persons' monies and do something like that."

Cataford was disappointed with Mercer's stand, but said with or without help, he plans to see the program through. He's not happy with the idea, though. "It's quite an arrangement to put together and I'm not going to be the one to do it."

Puffer said the township will send a letter to Shortreed, stating the Gypsy Moth problem is "reaching epidemic proportions and we'd like to see something done before it totally devastates the area." She said the committee chairman will "do everything he possibly can," and is working on the problem before the county council meeting. She also urged Cataford to inform the Gull Lake association of the spray proposal.

Gull Lake area resident Lou Cataford pulls back some bark to reveal just a few of the Gypsy Moths which are laying egg masses on his trees. If they are not sprayed next spring, thousands of caterpillars will be born to continue the defoliation of area trees. Cataford went to Lutterworth council to ask for some help.

Two women escape from Minden apartment fire

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

Two women managed to escape before an early morning fire gutted their apartments above two Minden main street stores last Thursday.

Heather Plumley and Kay Foster woke up after smelling smoke and hearing the smoke alarm in the building which houses three apartments as well as Main Street Fish and Chips and the Suzie-Q Boutique/Country Fabric and Crafts. Although the entire building had smoke and water damage, the apartment on the north side where the fire started was completely charred three feet up from the floor.

"Just before 6:30 I woke up out of the blue," Plumley told The Echo later that day. "The smoke was thick and dense and the foot of my bed was on fire."

A blanket Plumley used to try and put out the fire burst into flames. She then thought to wake up Foster.

"I banged and banged and banged on the door, and Kay finally answered, thank God. I ran out on the main street in my nightgown yelling for (building owner) Jack Burley, but he wasn't there yet."

Foster also attempted to put out the fire with an extinguisher Burley supplied earlier in the year.

"I got it out and thought it was over," she says. "Next thing I turn around and the fire was crawling right up the wall."

"It was scary," says Plumley. "I feel totally desolated now. I have nothing left. All I have is the taste of smoke."

Both women were impressed with work of the Minden Fire Department crew, who arrived five minutes after they were contacted.

"They were right here for us," says Plumley. "They were really good."

Fire Chief Don Booth says firefighters received the call at 6:50 a.m. and stayed for about three hours.

"When I got there the smoke was coming out of windows and there were flames coming out from the north side—it looked fairly fierce," he says. "We managed to stop it before the other apartments were damaged too badly." Even a cat managed to escape the flames. "The cat was hanging from the roof. He was singed and obviously pretty shook up."

Booth blames careless smoking as cause of the fire because it started on a chesterfield with no electrical wiring nearby. He has yet to report on the damages, and says it's difficult to estimate because each of the businesses and the apartments are under different insurance companies. "It's tough to hazard a guess, but I would say damages are probably around $65,000."

Booth says this fire was particularly dangerous for the crew to handle because it was up a narrow staircase inside the building. Firefighters accessed the building from front and back entrances.

"That type of fire you have to get inside to find. It's dangerous to go inside, and we hate to have to do it. If we didn't get at it so early, those people would have died for sure."

When the apartment changed hands last year, Booth made an inspection of the building and insisted upon a smoke alarm before the apartments could be rented out. Now he's certainly glad Burley followed this requirement.

"Otherwise there would have been almost a certain loss of lives that morning. And without that alarm, we might have lost the building and one or two others besides."

When Burley arrived at the building that morning the fire was still raging.

"Thank God no one was hurt," he says. "Those two were lucky to get out of here alive. I'll tell you, the light bulbs were just snapping and there was lots of smoke and fire

Haliburton ambulance attendants join union

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

Haliburton ambulance attendants have become members of the Ontario Public Service Employees Union (OPSEU).

The application to join the union was made in May, and on June 27 the union received certification from the Labour Relations Board to represent the local attendants. No objections to unionization were raised by the municipality at the Labour Relations Board hearing.

"There was overwhelming support for the union," says Sandra Laycock, the organizing representative for OPSEU. "The sign-up was approaching 100 per cent, which suggests there was a great deal of disenchantment with the terms and conditions of employment."

"They felt they wanted better representation," says local Ambulance Manager, Rob Luke. "Any association with one voice can get together and decide what they want to see in their contract, working conditions, pay, and benefits."

Contract negotiations have not yet begun, but Laycock says they are looking forward to striking a collective agreement.

However, before a contract decision can be reached there is a matter that the union would like addressed.

The Haliburton and District Ambulance Service recently decided to remove one ambulance from call-back status after 1 a.m. Instead of having two crews in Haliburton and one crew in Minden on call-back status there will be one crew for each base.

Provided they are available, ambulances from Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon will come to Minden or the Allsaw flats on standby if both the local ambulances are out of the area. If the Fenelon Falls or Bobcaygeon ambulance is not available the duty officer in Haliburton will place the second Haliburton ambulance on standby.

But the decision by the ambulance service was made without adequate notification, says Laycock.

"A notice was posted by the employer for less than a week," she says. "As soon as it went up I had several telephone calls (from ambulance attendants)."

She says that under Section 79 of the Ontario Labour Relations Act, a freeze is imposed on the terms and conditions of employment, until the union gives consent to make any changes. The change in procedure was made after the union had applied for certification, and Laycock says she did not receive written notification. In her view that is "unsatisfactory."

She has written to Ambulance Manager Rob Luke, and if "an answer is not forthcoming or satisfactory, unfair labour practice charges will have to be laid". She says she expects a response by August 18.

The major concern of the ambulance attendants and Laycock is the service to the public. Laycock says people in the area will not be receiving adequate coverage.

"If there is a car accident and only one vehicle open, and the driver/attendant goes to that call, and someone else has a heart attack on the other end of the county, what's going to happen?"

A full load of equipment is taken in to every forest fire with Bill Ohlmann and his crew. The load includes food (which they're often too tired to cook), camping gear, water pump and hose, and can weigh up to 70 pounds.

Lutterworth buys tank to curb dust on roads

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Lutterworth residents won't have to live with clouds of dust after the township purchases a water tank unit and pump to wet down limestone crush after it is applied to the roads.

At last week's meeting, Margaret Miller was told council has given roads superintendent Kevin Hill approval for the purchases after she made a presentation to council about excessive dust and unsafe driving conditions on Lutterworth Boundary Road.

Limestone dust filled the air after a road crew spread crush on the highway over a three-day period last month.

"We were eating it," said Mrs. Miller. "It was in our teeth, it was in our food, it was in everything."

Visibility on the road was poor because the dust was so dense, she added, saying her husband nearly clipped a bicycle rider while driving his car.

"I went hysterical after that. It was like being lost in the smoke. Car lights didn't help. You couldn't even see our barn from the road. It was unreal."

The dust was bad during the three days of work, but Mrs. Miller didn't complain, expecting the crush to be hosed down before road crews stopped work for the weekend. When dust problems continued during the weekend, she tried phoning the municipal office to reach Hill on Saturday, but to no avail. The office was closed.

"I never dreamt of any human being leaving us in a mess like that. Why couldn't he have come back to wet it down just to give us some rest?"

Excitement and challenge keep forest firefighters coming back

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

Being a firefighter is hot, dirty work, and when you are battling forest fires for days on end, the challenges are even more demanding. But the conditions that make the work difficult, also make it exciting.

"Every fire is different. You never really know what it is going to be like when you get there. It's pretty exciting," says Bill Ohlmann, a fire crew leader who just returned from an eight-acre fire in Parry Sound. "But the best part is when you see the helicopter coming to take you out. That's pretty nice."

The days are long, sometimes starting at dawn and continuing until it is too dark to see. And the working conditions are even worse than the hours. It is impossible to protect yourself from the smoke which Ohlmann says has an effect like smoking two packs of cigarettes. The heat can become almost unbearable, and sweat rolls from the men's brows constantly.

"You are constantly soaking wet (from perspiration)," says Ohlmann. "It's drink, drink, drink—pop and water. There are times when you just drink old beaver water straight out of the hose."

"And you always wear the same old dirty outfit (bright orange overalls). There's no point in putting on clean ones because when you go back into the burn they're black in ten minutes."

The men are dropped into the bush by helicopter. They take with them everything they will need for an overnight stay, and if necessary more supplies will be flown into them. The gear, which includes a tent, cookstove, fire hose, pump, and food, is heavy and there is no time to waste getting the equipment set up.

There is a definite strategy involved in fighting a forest fire, and it is up to the crew leader to decide on a plan of attack. The front of the fire is usually tackled first, unless a home or cottage is in danger. In situations where buildings (or lives) are at stake, the firefighters will do everything in their power to save them.

On the first day the crew is kept busy, laying down 400-foot sections of hose and working their way into

There were bargains galore at Guild of Fine Art's Art Auction

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Bargain hunters turned up in droves at the Guild of Fine Art's Art Auction last Thursday night and got exactly what they were looking for—high quality items at the lowest possible prices.

The ballroom of the PineStone Inn (the use of which had been donated as PineStone's contribution to the fundraising event) was lined with the items to be auctioned. Before the bidding started, hundreds of potential buyers browsed through the display, marking down their favourites.

Organizer Chris Lynd warned the bidders about a phenomenon called "bidding fever" but told them "don't hold back because it's a lot of fun." Numbers in hand, ready to wave them in the air when their favourite items came up to the block, the bidders prepared themselves.

Once again, artist John Leonard was the auctioneer, filling in the time between items with silly jokes—"in her past life, my wife Marilyn was a game show hostess, Vanna White," he said when his wife helped him with the door prize draw. Then there were the knowledge-testing questions for the free Royal Ontario Museum passes competition: "Which Group of Seven artist has the same first name as Wilma Flintstone's husband? Fred Varley." Leonard flubbed it however, when he asked "Which Canadian silversmith has the same first name as Lois..." (Lois Betteridge, a silversmith, was one of the most keen bidders at the auction.)

It seemed most people viewed the auction as a way to save some money, rather than as a strictly fundraising event for the Guild. For instance, a $100 gift certificate for Paulette's was bought for $90. As well, when items had a bottom limit set, the bidding did not go much higher, especially if the cost was more than $100.

But that doesn't mean a lot of money wasn't spent. The Guild estimates it raised at least $3,500, which is higher than last year's amount.

"We're really pleased" with the results, Lynd said after the auction. Only two of the 100 items didn't sell and people were really receptive to the items which were available.

The bidding was fierce at the Guild of Fine Art's Art Auction last Thursday night as hundreds of bargain hunters crowded into the ballroom at the PineStone Inn to get the best prices possible.

coming out of the windows."

Burley and wife Dawn purchased the building last year and, upon opening the fish and chip restaurant on May 19, found that business was booming. Although no equipment was touched, the restaurant faced some smoke and quite a bit of water damage.

"It's just unreal," says Mr. Burley. "This happened at the busiest time of the year."

"Business couldn't have been better," Mrs. Burley agrees. "It was more than we could have anticipated, and then this happens. But the people in Minden have been really good to us. All I've had all morning is a lot of support from the townspeople."

"We spent a lot of time working on this restaurant. It'll be open again, I can guarantee that. We'll just have to do it all over."

"The one or two calls the pants will be used on makes it worth the money," adds Luke, who says the Ministry of Health recently provided both bases with Intubation kits, used by attendants and doctors to maintain a patient's air passages. IV kits are also kept in the ambulances to provide patients with intravenous fluid replacement.

The Minden and Haliburton ambulance bases cover the entire county. "They have the ability to go back and forth to cover both areas, and share extra equipment when needed," says Luke. "That's the beauty of the whole system."

Some specialized equipment is needed by the county's attendants because they travel long distances; with a number of trauma calls, more patients are being flown out to hospitals which can deal with those cases. In the meantime, life-sustaining equipment is necessary. Most equipment is provided by the health ministry, which doesn't always provide specialized items.

"We try not to rely a great deal on personal donations," says Luke. "When it comes down to specialized pieces of equipment, though, we do rely on donations to better serve the people."

Three-year-old Meghan Foulds of Cannington was just one of the hundreds of spectators who enjoyed the Haliburton Model Railroaders Association's hobbies and craft show at the high school last weekend.

Water tank should help stop Lutterworth dust problems of powder that blows all weekend, where do we go for help? Do we just eat it till we die?"

Hill explained there was little he could do to help because the township has no water tank to wet the crush. In the past, oil was used over the crush to control dust, but this practise was banned after the Ministry of the Environment discovered oil's harmful affects when it rains.

Hill stressed the necessity of repeated gradings and applications of crush on over-used roads.

"Your road tends to washboard. Well over 200 cars a day travel down there, and that crush takes no durability. We did the same work on Davis Lake and Swanson Roads.

"Everytime we grade, we lose calcium," Hill continued. "If it's a dry August, and I need to use a lot of calcium, I won't have anymore left for the rest of the year. On top of that, I've got no water truck and no budget. So what can I do?"

After a road is graded with crush, calcium is spread over top to help control dust. However, calcium is expensive, so road crews use it carefully to avoid running out

Mrs. Miller agreed with Hill that by Saturday the calcium took affect and controlled the dust, "but we ate an awful lot of it before that."

Reeve Carol Puffer told her the township's roads committee is concerned about improving the road and is "looking toward putting high float and hard top over it."

Santa Claus will be coming to town

Santa Claus will be coming to town this Christmas if all goes according to plans by the Minden Lion's Club.

Bill Stackhouse represented the club at the last council meeting to request a permit to hold a Santa Claus Parade on Saturday, December 16.

Reeve Ray Moore was enthusiastic about the idea, and gave Stackhouse and the Lion's Club the go-ahead.

"I'm very pleased to see you and the club taking this initiative," he told Stackhouse. "A Santa Claus Parade is something that's been sorely lacking in Minden for the last couple of years. My grandchildren have been asking why we don't have one like they do in other places."

So far the venture is in the early preparation stages. The club is planning to approach Minden's Business Improvement Area (BIA) for help, and will request financial support from council later in the year.

accidents in which six people were injured over the weekend. None of the injuries were serious, and OPP Communications Officer Mike Maybee says this is a sign that people are wearing their seatbelts.

"The injuries are all minor as far as I know. I am not aware of any major injuries," he says. "Usually when we see minor injuries it is because people are wearing their seatbelts. But we are still charging people daily with seatbelt violations."

Although the number of accidents may seem high, Maybee says it is about par for most holiday weekends. Good driving conditions on the high traffic days were a help.

The future decided

Haliburton's sewer line extension project may still be in bureaucratic limbo, awaiting funding approval that may never come, but the groundwork to facilitate the project continues to be laid. On Tuesday, a public information session will be held at the Haliburton Legion to answer questions about the project. Many people are worried that construction of a sewer line to resorts on Lake Kashagawigamog and expansion of the Haliburton sewage treatment plant could have a negative impact on water quality in the lake chain. Those concerns were voiced on the Victoria Day weekend by some of the residents who attended a property owners association meeting, and they have continued to be expressed by people who have an interest in what happens to Lake Kashagawigamog, whether because they own property on the lake chain or because they are worried about the environment in general.

With so much emotion surrounding environmental issues, there is a risk that people may not approach Tuesday's meeting, and subsequent steps in the environmental review process, with an open mind. It is important, however, to let the facts be aired before any decision can be made about whether the project should proceed.

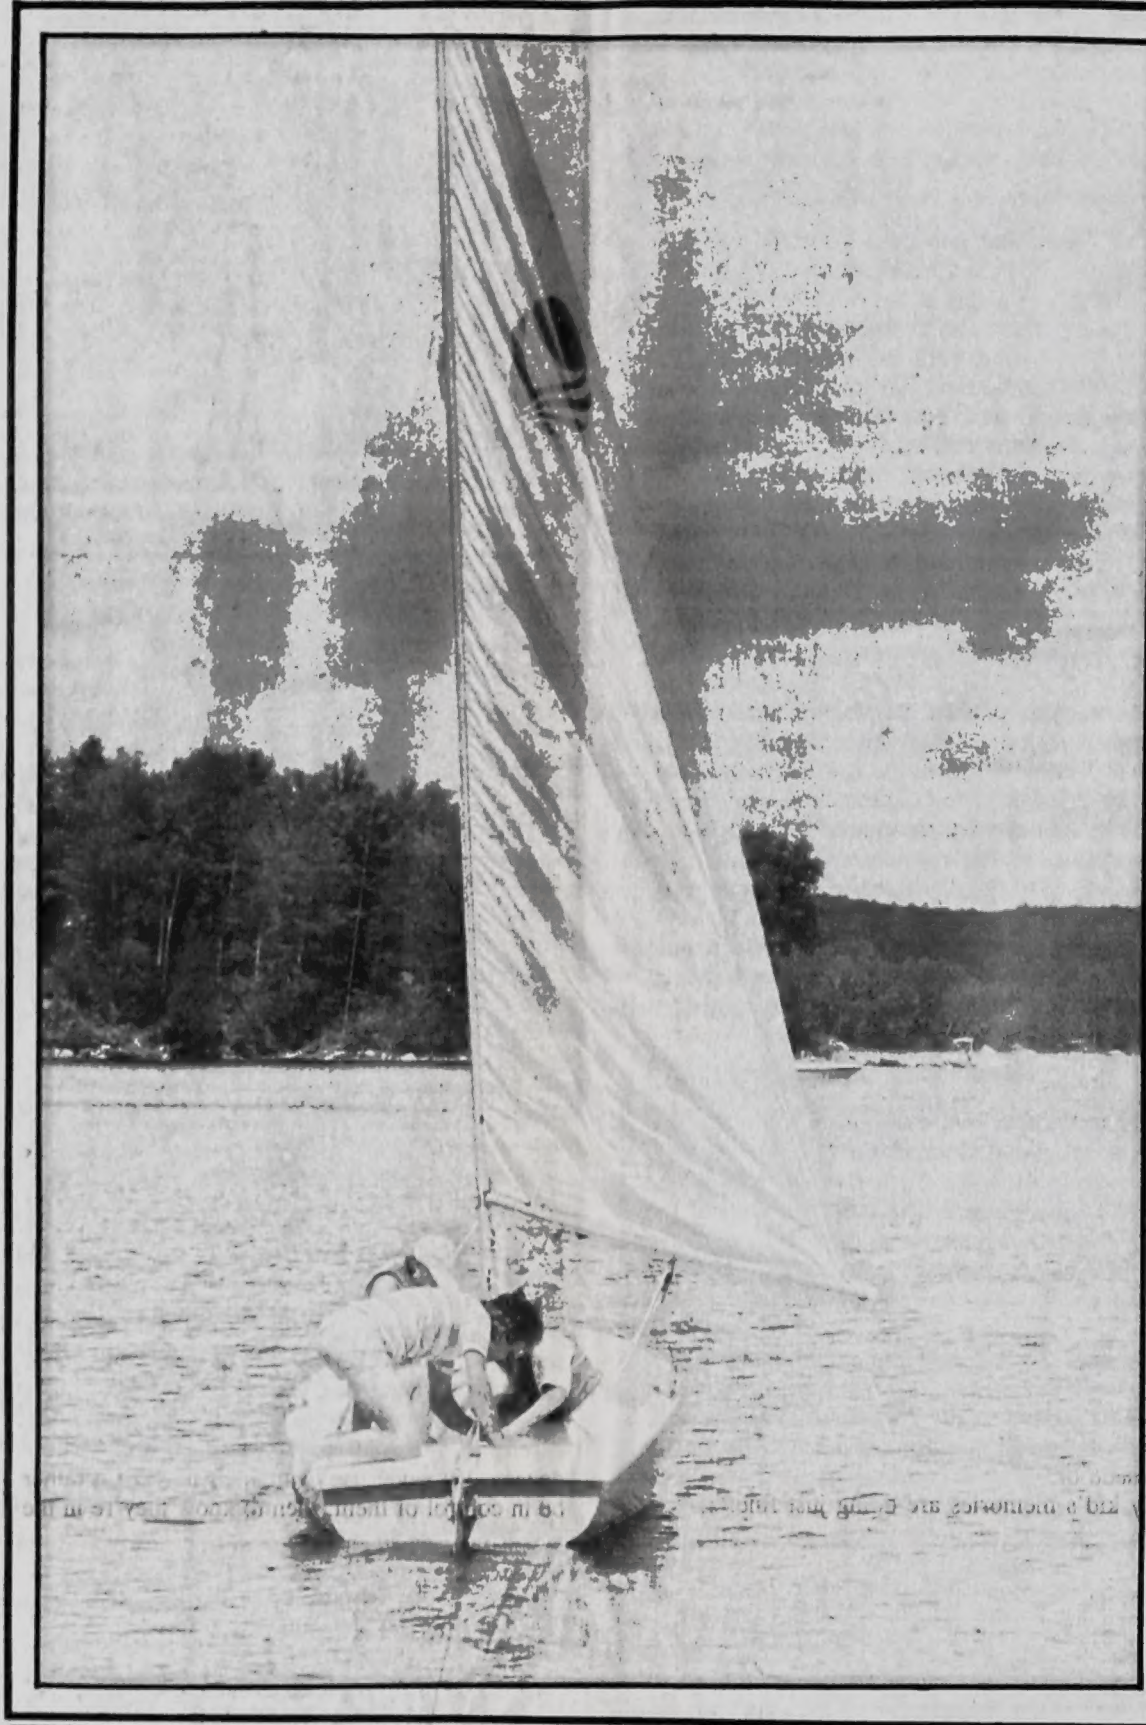

Before the sewer line to Kashagawigamog resorts can be built, Haliburton's sewage treatment plant must be expanded. At present, expansion plans are linked to the sewer line project, but community growth will demand that the plant be enlarged eventually, even in the current project does not proceed. It is important to note that the plant's capacity to treat effluent will not merely be expanded, but improved. The technology presently employed at the plant is more than 10 years old, and current standards are more stringent than they were in the mid 1970's. An expanded plant would treat sewage more effectively, and the effluent flowing from the outfall pipe into Lake Kashagawigamog might, in fact, be cleaner and less nutrient laden than the effluent being pumped into the lake at the moment.

There is no question that the quality of water in the Lake Kashagawigamog chain has deteriorated markedly in the past 10 years. The eyes and nose detect it, and scientific tests confirm it. Many people believe the steady decline in water quality can be traced back to construction of the sewage plant, but to date, there has been no hard evidence to prove this is the case. What is happening to the lake may, in fact, be the result of a number of factors, including over-development, manipulation of the shoreline — there are more lawns and artificial beaches on the Kashagawigamog chain than on most other area lakes — increased use of cottages — many of which may have inadequate septic systems — and year round demand for accommodation at the lake's many resorts. No single source of lake pollution can be identified, and property owners who are worried about the future of the lake must recognize the impact of their own activities, and be prepared to change them if they are serious about slowing, and ultimately reversing, enrichment and pollution.

It must also be recognized that the present systems used by the resorts to handle sewage are not adequate. While the systems presumably meet health and environmental regulations, some people with an interest in the lake's future privately acknowledge that the pollution flowing into the lake from resorts is getting worse every year. How could it be otherwise, with tourism growing and multiple expansions carried out over the past few years?

There is no certainty that the sewer line will ever be built, or that the expansion currently envisioned for the sewage plant will take place. It is certain, however, that unless better ways of handling sewage are found, water quality in the lake will continue to go down.

Many questions need to be answered before expansion of the sewage plant can proceed. People need to be satisfied that an expanded plant will be a more efficient, less environmentally damaging plant than the one that is now operating. But the future of the project should be decided on reason and information, not on emotion. The opportunity to save the lake, if indeed the current project is such an opportunity, may not come again.

Truth cannot hide from the heart

AS OTHERS SEE IT

Bob Giuliano

WE WENT DOWN to the Union Creek Fish and Chips restaurant the other day. We'd heard so many good reports of this place south of Kilmount that we decided to try it out. The dinner was great. We went early, five o'clock, and the place was almost full. Everyone there was grey haired and ageless. I mused to Betty that these "senior citizens" know where the good food is and to get there early. Betty said, "Bob, those people are us! They are our age!" Betty is sometimes very depressing.

In church Sunday morning the folks were again the creaking bones set. I didn't comment to my partner, but stuck to my prayers. Nevertheless, I was soon overtaken by the single reality that on this hot summer morning, the worshippers were closer to eternity than we might think. I mused (to myself) that these folks had seen a lot of life; a lot of church life too. Yet, they were still there. Why do folks go to church? I've never figured it out. God once talked it over with Satan and wondered out loud why good folks are good. That's how the elderly John got put into the experiment of poverty and disease: God and Satan disagreed about why he kept being faithful. Satan figured it was easy for a man to be good and go to church when everything was going well for him but that if times got tough, old faithful John would show his true colours!

God, on the other hand, thought better of man and figured he would be faithful no matter what. So the experiment was begun to find out why the righteous are faithful.

I guess if God could believe that human motives are out of deep faithful love beyond words or explanations, I could believe that folks are in church for noble reasons too.

I looked around at the bent bodies, the grey-white hair, the deep wrinkles and sometimes sagging skin and listened to voices which crack uncontrollably again, like adolescence. The singing was energetic, the prayerful reflection of each was out of reach, each person, each couple, centred in their own offering of worship. It became clear that there was a courage, almost defiance in these older worshippers. They had seen a lot of life, sorrow, heartache and tragedy — nevertheless they were there! Human life is more than what wants to beat you down and make you bitter. In the face of the poverty of human life — nevertheless, "we will give thanks."

I was reminded that the Jews always took three firm steps "into the Presence" when they began their prayers. It was an act of courage, responding to the invitation to be more than trivialized by life. They stepped into the Presence, as those older folks were doing in church, opening their heart together to one beyond the mystery of their uncertain lives.

It felt good to be a part of these folks. We are one, after all no matter what age, at the deepest level of our souls. We all ask out of the puzzle of our days, "Is there a Word from the Lord?" Beneath the banal prejudices and narrow minds, the magical religion and the egotistical atheism, we are quite noble in our motives, as only God, not Satan, can see.

At that level of the human spirit there is a kind of youthfulness, a sort of child-likeness that caused the eyes of the worshippers to sparkle. Burdened but playful, it seems.

If that's us, as Betty keeps reminding me, the reason I don't identify with what my eyes see aging to be, is that the child-like, playful spirit within, is who I know myself to be. My eyes once gain lie to me. My eyes tell me what aging looks like, the physical appearance. But the truth cannot be seen with the eyes.

A friend who had half his face blown away and both his hands, wrote with iron hooks in the front of a book he gave me, "It is only with heart that one can see rightly. What is true is hidden from the eyes." (The words of the fox in Exupery's "Little Prince".)

That is true in spades when we look at us aging folks. What is true is seen only with the heart.

Each summer, after we have settled into the cottage, this surprising partner of mine makes us plan our funerals! We go over it all again and again until each of us is sure what the other wants. I joke about it, but know it has to be done. So, first Betty outlines who is to lead, preach, etc., what is to be sung and celebrated. Then the disposal of the body and the grave sight. My turn follows. Call the Presbytery, do it simply, sing lots of stuff of praise and drop me off at Ingoldsby with the pioneers. (Burn my sermons and journals).

It is not until death is faced can we truly play, it seems. Maybe that's why elderly worshippers have such playful, child-like eyes.

IF YOU WERE ONE of the lucky people who took time out to attend Midnight Madness held in Haliburton on Friday night I sincerely hope you had a good time. Right from the kick off at 8:00 PM until the final bell at midnight the village was rocking with excitement while hundreds of shoppers made their way into the business places to take advantage of the many bargains on display at participating stores. Some people roamed the streets visiting with their neighbours and friends while others stopped to listen to the Botsford Street Ramblers jazz and Dixieland band playing out of the IGA parking lot while others gathered around the Halco Plaza to listen to western style music from a local group known as the North Country Express. Having music at both ends of the street paid off this year for the merchants in the Halco Plaza and those in the immediate area, on Saturday morning it was interesting to listen to the armchair critics who came out to tell us what was right and wrong about the big evening. We know that the evening is never perfect and we certainly appreciate your comments but I think that you have to agree that this year's Midnight Madness was one of the best since the big night originated about eight years ago. To begin with there was music to suit everyone's taste, the weather was ideal, two more hours were added this year for your shopping convenience, it brought back memories of the way Saturday nights used to be and there was so much excitement you could feel it in the air. Each year I always say that this is the year that I won't get excited about the big night but when Midnight Madness time rolls around I can feel the excitement starting to build and it makes me feel like a kid again. This year some business places did double the business of previous years while others broke records. Those who did not five the bargains found business not as good as they expected. But all in all it was a great evening once again and we are looking forward to next year already. We hope you are too.

Each and every year at this time I like to take time out to comment on the Haliburton Rotary Carnival and parade. This year will be no exception. The parade was one of the best in years and possible one of the longest in Rotary Club history. When the front of the parade was heading back to Rotary Beach were it all began, the last float was just leaving the park. For those, who like myself believe that music makes a parade, their wishes came true when the parade led by the Royal Canadian Legion Branch 129 Pipe band of Haliburton and followed by two other pipe bands paraded around the route with the ever popular Kawartha Cavaliers Drum and Bugle Corp. coming along in fine style.

Bill Scott, M.P. for Victoria-Haliburton will be on hand to host the 22nd annual Progressive Conservative Barbecue which will be held this coming Saturday, August 12, at the Kilmount Fair Grounds. Social Hour 5:30 PM. Dinner 6:30 PM. Kids free.

Now that the Rotary Carnival and Midnight Madness are over for another year it's time to turn our thoughts and attention to the upcoming 4th annual Bluegrass Festival which is slated for Glebe Centennial Park in Haliburton this coming Friday, Saturday and Sunday, August 11-12-13. This annual family oriented jamboree in a park-like setting will feature some tremendous Bluegrass groups including, The Dixie Flyers, Grassworks, Maple Hill Bluegrass, Haldimand County Line, Silver Birch Bluegrass, The Taylor Family, and White Water Bluegrass. The all star musical line-up will include The New Coon Creek Girls and also starring Appalachian Express. special added attractions are the Step In Time Cloggers, The Cindy Thompson Show and Jim Higgins as the M.C. This popular yearly event promises to be bigger and better than ever and the organizers Royal Canadian Legion Branch 129 have gone all out to insure that all who will be attending will have an outstanding weekend that will long be remembered. The Legion's reminding everyone to leave their cars at home and take the bus. You can take a bus in town every hour and half hour on the three days.

Here, there and everywhere... Mr. and Mrs. Bob Carnochan of Orillia are vacationing at Edgewater Beach. Bob, along with Bill Farrell, caught two big fish on a recent fishing trip... Mr. and Mrs. Dick Holland and family are holidaying at their cottage on Drag Lake... Mr. and Mrs. Jim Perrin of Haliburton have returned home to the Parklane Apartments following a visit with relatives in Manitoba... Rev. and Mrs. Grant MacDonald of Kitchener, who have a cottage on Drag Lake are vacationing in the area... Mrs. and Mrs. Bill Harding of Toronto were recent visitors to Haliburton... Mrs. and Mrs. Ron Austin of Huntsville were recent visitors to the village... Mrs. and Mrs. Tony Meissner of Oakville were visiting in Haliburton recently... Hundreds of people were in attendance at the many events held in Haliburton County over the past Civic Holiday weekend... Rev. John Smith of Chatham was a visitor in Haliburton one day last week.

Thanks for the terrific memories

I DON'T KNOW if any Echo columnists have ever had a 'guest columnist' before, so this may be a first. One of my daughters is up visiting with her family, and she wanted to take a crack at it.

Janet, her husband Marty and their children have visited with us each summer since we've had the house, and partly for conveniences (like the plumbing), and partly because one of the children was always too young to be left unattended, they have always stayed with us at the house.

Our original 'home' here was the trailer we camped in with our children for a dozen years, and they each used to stay in it with their mates when they visited, even after we built our house. At least they did, until little children complicated things.

This year, Janet decided to move her family back in, give them a taste of camping out in the woods. The other evening, while she waited for Matthew and Leanne to fall asleep, she wrote the following:

By Janet Mifsud

I'm sure most of you carry pleasant memories of the summer vacations of your youth, whether it was at camp or the cottage. I'd wager that some of the kids at the local camps are making their memories now, judging from the fun they were having in the parade last week.

(Speaking of memories, you know you are getting old when these kids are acting out your teenage memories as the "Good Old Days" theme—peace symbols, flower power and 'make love not war').

This summer I found myself wondering about the memories my own children are forming. I was concerned about whether or not their summer vacation memories would measure up to my own, thirty years from now.

Camping—those are my memories! Every year on the last day of school, Mom and Dad, five kids and a dog (found while camping at a Provincial Park by my brother or myself depending on who's memories you are listening to) all piled into the stationwagon which had been hitched up to our trailer while we were still at school.

Off we went for three weeks of sightseeing, of the world's most beautiful places.

beaches, lakes and oceans and historical sight visiting. Somewhere different every year—a trip carefully planned by Mom and Dad for months before departure. After that major trip we were home for only a week or two before heading to Ipperwash (a Provincial Park on Lake Huron).

The trailer was parked and leveled, tarps and tents set up and a month full of fun and future memories lay ahead of us. Dad commuted on weekends while the rest of us explored beaches and sand dunes and friendships.

We met kids year after year who became winter pen pals. And we built memories of drip castle building, collecting pop bottles for the two-cent deposit, campfires and marshmallows, fossil hunting, free movie nights at the camp store, chasing the ice man's truck and as I got older, to be painfully honest, flirting with the lifeguards.

Fortunately, before that last one got too serious, I became old enough to get a summer job. Fortunately for my morality—unfortunately for my memories. A few years later Mom and Dad bought the property in Donald and permanently parked the trailer. My husband has a different kind of summer memories. Cottaging with his extended family on Georgian Bay. To him we ARE camping when we come up here to visit Mom and Dad because they don't have a waterbed. He'd like to buy a cottage.

I, on the other hand, could never understand why anyone would want to commit to going to the same place every summer and have a second home to put hours of work into. I'd like to buy camping equipment. No doubt economics affected my parents' decision to take up camping and I kept hoping it would affect my husband's.

Finally, just two weeks ago, we went camping for a weekend with friends. As we pulled into the campground, tears came to my eyes as I watched the kids running around playing and saw large groups of people roasting marshmallows over campfires. My own memories came flooding back. I asked my husband how he could rob our children of these memories.

Now we have come for our annual summer visit to Mom and Dad. My eight-year-old son keeps a daily journal. At least a third of it is about his plans to go to Haliburton—fishing with Dad, walking the dogs with Grandma, playing on Poppy's beach or in the woods and riding Poppy's snowmobiles—and stories about all those things when he comes home.

Within twelve hours of our arrival, as I watched him go down the path through the woods with Grandma for their daily early morning dog walk, I suddenly realized that this is the stuff memories are made of.

My kid's memories are doing just fine.

Pic of the Past

This is a familiar old shot with one difference—the cow lying out in front of the Dysart Municipal office. Livestock were allowed to roam the streets until the 1930's, when a group of councillors gathered in this building to put a stop to this waste management problem. Sam Magahy of Miskawbi Lake, who brought in this picture, adds a note which says the Japanese cupola on the hall was an up-to-date style at the turn of the century. He also says the door on the side led to the caretaker's quarters.

Plastic recycling end to waste

NORTHERN LIGHTS

Virginia Muenzel

HAVE YOU BEEN TRYING to break the plastic bag habit, but find that they still creep into your life? I know the feeling. Even those of us who preach and nag continuously, every so often, go to town without our own shopping bags. Or forget to tell the clerks that we prefer paper, or boxes. Sometimes, even when we remember all that, the clerks will gather up all our deliberately loose fruit and sneak it into a plastic bag. In our case, the egg customers, whom we've so carefully trained to recycle, bring us bags by the dozens. I'll never use them all. And yet I'd rather be in control of them, then to know they're in the dump. Then, of course, when the "Sweat Lodge" was in the works, we called for 'all the bags you can find.' They're still bringing them.

However, it seems there is a solution to our dilemma. One of the C.H.A.N.G.E. fellows has taken on the responsibility of encouraging plastic recycling. On August 26th, we're going to collect all the nasty plastic bags and tubs and send them off with Murray Clarke to an outfit called 'Plasti-cycle' in Mississauga.

It seems Mississauga has taken on the roll of leadership in reusable plastic products. A new company, called 'Super Wood,' has developed a process which grinds and melts plastic. Then it is formed into molds which are used for fence posts, park benches, etc.

This is the wave of the future. If entrepreneurs are encouraged to develop recycling processes which are not only ecologically sound but profitable as well, perhaps industry will finally follow suit.

Apparently, by the New Year, Mississauga will be collecting all forms of plastic in blue boxes. They've taken on an enormous task! The recycling of plastic is very problematic. The way I understand it, there are literally thousands of different types of plastics. Each created from a unique chemical recipe. Recipes that, often can't be inter-mixed. The challenge is beyond our comprehension. And these Mississauga people deserve some special merit for accepting it.

So how can we contribute? Our part is very simple. Gather up all those plastic bags. Turn them each inside out. Remove all foreign objects, stack them and tie the handles together loosely with string.

We can also get rid of all those margarine, yogurt, cottage cheese, etc., containers. Wash them and please remove all paper labels from them including the price stickers. If they won't easily soak off, simply cut them off.

Having done this, on Saturday, August 26th, we can bring all we've collected to the Sir Sandford Fleming Campus between 10 AM and 2 PM. The C.H.A.N.G.E. people will do the rest.

While we're gathering, and washing, and bundling, it might be a good idea to meditate on what a nuisance plastic can become, and how much easier life might be with our own shopping bags.

Gentle persuasion heads him off at the pass

DOWN OUR ROAD

Sharon Lynch

THERE WAS A KNOCK at her door and she went to answer it. Wondering who it could be at this hour of the day, for it was going on to ten o'clock at night, she opened it to find Henry standing on the threshold. She had to take a second look to confirm it was indeed Henry because at first glance she would never have recognized him.

"I was in the neighbourhood and thought I'd stop by to see if you had anything for the dump. I'm making my rounds in the morning so if you've got any garbage I can take it with me now." These words were said in one long breath, quickly, nervously and sounded as though they had been rehearsed at least ten times. Henry stood awkwardly in the doorway, not sure what kind of a reception he was about to get.

"Oh. Well as a matter of fact, I do have some garbage Henry. If you're sure it's no trouble, I'd really appreciate you taking it," came Kate's reply as she looked at Henry a little closer. "But where are my manners! Come on in. I was just about to make myself a coffee. Would you like one?"

"O.K. Thanks Kate, don't mind if I do." And in he walked.

Now the reason Kate had to take a second look at Henry was that he was all spiffed up; face and hands washed, hair combed and he was wearing a clean shirt that still showed the creases on the arms. This was not the Henry Kate knew. Ever since she could remember, that one thing that stuck in her mind about Henry was that he did not have much use for soap and water. He had many good qualities, but cleanliness was way down on his list of priorities. In fact, it wasn't even on the list. So when he appeared at this time on a Saturday night, shined up like a new pair of boots, Kate knew something was up.

Henry had been admiring Kate from afar for months, but had neither the courage nor the know-how to do anything about it. He had had a rough life with more downs than ups and most of that life had been spent on figuring out how to just survive. It had left little time for such things as socializing with women. Born with a slight limp, he had suffered the usual humiliations in his childhood. Lack of schooling and fending for himself from an early age had left him as an adult with little self-confidence and even less regular income. He had learned to survive by his wits, to catch the odd job before it passed him by and live where the winds of chance took him.

His relations were spread throughout the county and he had boarded with several over the years. But eventually his aversion to baths and the lack of paycheck meant it was time to move on. He was not a lazy man. Give him a job to do and he would do it well—for a week or two. But he found routine hard to take and when it became too much for him, he'd up and quit, knowing that he would always get by somehow. And so he did. Then he met Kate. Suddenly he saw something he wanted. If he could only figure out how to go about getting it.

Kate on the other hand came from an entirely different world. She had been born and raised in the city. To her, cleanliness really was next to Godliness. There were other differences too. She had moved from a regular job as a secretary in Toronto to a regular job in a legal firm in Haliburton. With thrift and careful planning she had managed to save enough for the down payment on a little house which she was now working hard to pay for. She liked to read, walk in the bush and ride horses. Henry liked to watch T.V.

So when he showed up that night, she had a fair idea of what he was up to. She couldn't help but notice the looks he gave her when he thought she was looking the other way. While she like him as a friend, someone to gossip with, discuss the weather or swap tall tales, that was as far as it went. But she didn't want to hurt his feelings and she didn't want to lose his friendship. It was a real dilemma. Then she had an idea.

"You know what happened at work yesterday, Henry?" she began and launched into a detailed description of a legal dispute in which her office was embroiled. Kate threw in as many technical words as possible. Henry smiled, nodded and interjected the odd, 'tsk, tsk,' as she spoke, but all the while he continued looking at her with that look of his. Then she asked him if he had read any good books lately and when he replied in the negative, she said, "Let me tell you about this great novel I've just finished." She was off again, but he just kept smiling, nodding and looking.

Finally, in desperation, she casually mentioned a fellow she had met at the dance last weekend. Immediately Henry stiffened. Without saying too much, Kate hinted that he seemed a nice person and they might have a date for the show next Friday. "What do you think Henry? I'd like to go but I don't want to seem too eager," she asked, using the most sister-to-brother tone she could muster.

That did it. After gulping down his second cup of coffee in record time, Henry loaded the garbage onto his truck and rode off into the night. He came back other times, but it was always with one of his cousins and he looked like the Henry she had always known.

The period of about six months went by and Kate didn't see him. It was as though he had dropped off the face of the earth. She was unloading some junk at the dump one day on her way into work, when she heard a voice.

"Hello Kate. How are you now?" She turned around to see Henry smiling at her. He was pushing refuse around with a pitchfork.

"Hi Henry. Long time no see. Do you work here now?"

He told her he did and had been for the last half year. With pride he pointed out his new truck, bought second-hand and now covered in dust and mud. Some things never change. Kate wished him good luck and hoped he wouldn't be such a stranger. Henry replied that he'd be around one of these days for a coffee.

As she drove through the dump gates Kate glanced in her rear view mirror. Henry was busy again with his pitchfork. He no longer had that look in his eye. She hoped he did drop around for coffee though. She was dying to catch up on the gossip.

Being picky about the berries

OFF THE RECORD

Susan Grober

"Let me take you down, 'cause we're going to Strawberry Fields. Nothing is real. And nothing to get hung about. Strawberry Fields Forever."

JOHN LENNON MIGHT NOT HAVE BEEN thinking about strawberry picking when he wrote those familiar words, but one thing is for certain—I'm glad strawberry fields don't last forever.

Each year my mother has warned me to be prepared to accompany her strawberry picking. And each year I've managed to weasel my way out of it...except once.

It was a humid day, and somehow the heat must have affected my brain enough to make me feel guilty for avoiding all trips to the strawberry patch. Mom had plans to make mega-amounts of jam that afternoon and certainly would have preferred some help while traipsing for berries. Even if it was an obnoxious teenager.

I gave in. We drove out to a little farm off of Highway 121, six quart baskets loaded in the trunk.

Memories of that day are a little vague—it wasn't exactly the pinnacle of my formative years. It had rained a little that morning, so the earth was wet. The sun was beating down its strong rays. My arms and legs got scratched by vines along the trip to the patch. Mosquitoes and horseflies hummed overhead.

I absolutely hated the experience, and vowed to never again pick strawberries.

As strawberry season approached this year, it was not only my mother who taunted me about picking the dreaded fruit. Women in the office happily discussed recipes for jams and shortcakes, all looking forward to trudging through the trenches on a pick-your-own farm.

The strange thing is, I actually began to warm to the idea. Blaming teenage moodiness on my past bad experience, I began to have romantic notions of strolling through the fields, basket in hand, searching through the tender green leaves to find stems laden with clumps of rich ripe fruit.

My basket would fill quickly as I plucked the blazing red berries with ease, travelling down the rows, soft soil underfoot.

It was late on a Friday evening when the time finally came for me to pick. I'd been driving around that day with a basket in the car, all ready to fill with lusciously sweet strawberries. A can of bug spray and pair of sneakers rolled around in the trunk. I was prepared.

But I still hated it. Mud filled my shoes. Bugs swarmed my head. Strawberry juice stained my blouse. Nothing spectacularly horrific about the experience—it's just one of those things I loathe doing.

So next time I'm asked to pick strawberries, I'll refuse, never again to be tempted by forbidden fruit.

Soccer seniors beat juniors, 5 to 2

The Haliburton senior soccer team faced off against their junior counterparts last Wednesday night, and both teams were disappointed with the seniors' 5-2 win.

"I wasn't happy with the game," says the seniors' manager, Brian Moore. "We didn't play as a team a lot of the time. It became a game where people ran up their own personal (scoring) totals."

"It's frustrating. We're coming into the play-offs and we have to start working on some of the finer points of the game. Once you pick up bad habits, they're hard to break."

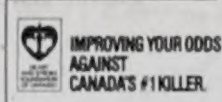

The juniors were also disappointed with their loss. "We thought we would get more goals," says Jan Haedicke, of the junior team. "We played exceptionally well—they were just better."

Tom Eager started off the scoring for the seniors, giving them an early lead. Hans Walter scored the second and fifth goals, Joe Mancuso had the third, and Dave Bush scored the fourth.

Ryan Timbers and Cecil Smith scored for the junior team, but it was not enough to give them the win.

Both teams have one more regular season game before starting the play-off series. The seniors take on Muskoka Inter on Sunday, and the juniors play Orillia City. Both games will be held at Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden.

A difference in technique doesn't affect love of sport

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

There are many differences between playing soccer in Germany, and playing in Haliburton. But some things never change, including Jan Haedicke's commitment to the game.

Growing up in Europe, Jan has been playing soccer on the streets with his friends since he was little. For the past seven years he has been playing in competitive leagues, including the Haliburton Soccer Club, and the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School team.

"In Germany everybody plays soccer, so I had to," says Jan. "Then we immigrated here. I liked soccer, so I continued to play."

Soccer players here are relatively inexperienced which accounts for the major differences between playing on the Haliburton junior soccer team and playing in a German league. It is a matter of time and practice, says Jan.

"The teams here are not as together," he says. "Two passes and then someone goes alone on goal. In school it's kick and run. In Germany the ball is passed."

However the junior team, which is made up of people from the high school team, is gaining the experience they need by playing in a more advanced league. Thinking they would like to win the high school championships, the team decided to join the soccer club so they could play older teams and learn from them. And it seems to be working.

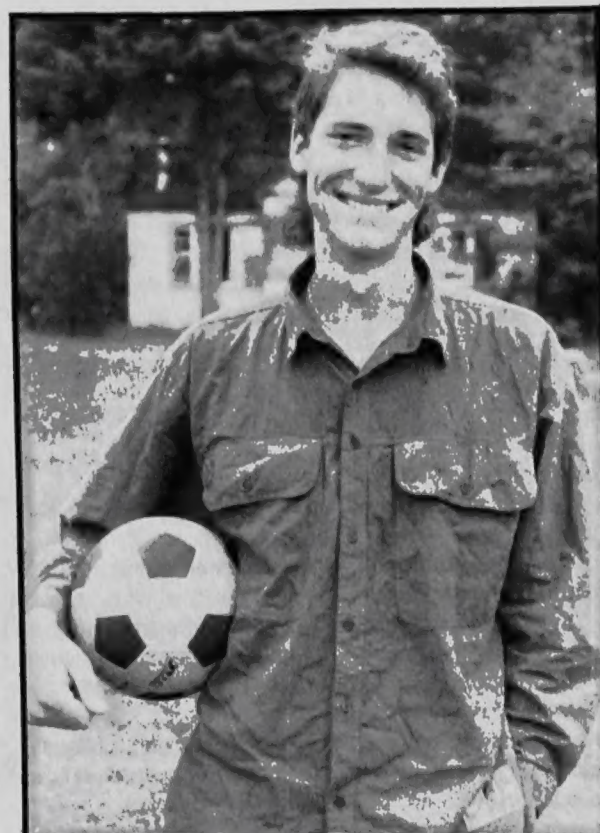

"Now that we are playing with experienced players we are learning to pass," says Jan. "We are getting better every game, and we have been quite competitive against the other teams. We've always lost (the game) in the end, but we've won in experience."

The only obstacle the boys seem to be encountering is that none of them are able to make practices on a regular basis because of their summer jobs. The games are the only time they can get together.

"During the week it's hard to get together, so we don't really learn to play together in a practice," says Jan. "Because we are learning in a game we don't end up winning. We just have to try things out in a game."

"In Germany there are so many requests for soccer. If you don't come to practice you don't play in the game, but there are 20 people on a team there. Here we get 13 to most games, sometimes only 11."

Warriors lose first of series

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

The Haliburton Warrior's softball team lost a close 5-4 game to Fenelon Falls in the first of a three game semi-final series last Wednesday.

The team jumped to an early 1-0 lead, but Fenelon pulled ahead by two runs in the fourth. By the end of the sixth inning the Warriors were behind 3-2, but things started to look up.

Two Haliburton runners were out in the top of the seventh when Rob Craigen doubled. Barry Boice brought him home, and crossed the plate himself on a hit by Mike MacNaull, to give the Warriors a 4-3 lead.

Soccer a favourite game

Those who don't come to practice have to play or we lose even more people."

The sport is becoming more popular among the high school students, and there is more interest in joining the team each year. The soccer season corresponds with the football season, and Jan says some of the football players are starting to play soccer.

Although he plays the midfield most of the time, Jan likes to play forward so that he has an opportunity to score. And he says one of the biggest challenges in the game is to put one in the net.

"The most challenge is to score. I like to score," he says. "Another is to have a good game—a fair game so the other team will remember you as a fair team."

In addition to soccer, Jan enjoys windsurfing, waterskiing, and tennis, but the traditional North American sports will never catch on with him.

"The favourite sports here are baseball and hockey," he says. "I find those really boring, especially baseball. It's interesting if someone hits the ball, but most of the time they don't. I tried to play it, but it was too boring."

"I wouldn't play hockey, because it is too rough. Soccer is free. The field is so big you can outrun or pass (to avoid a fight)."

The rest of his free time is spent working at his parent's resort—Halimar (where he occasionally gets a game of tennis or soccer going with the guests), or playing guitar and singing. Jan is a self-taught musician with a love of The Beatles.

"My father gave me the inspiration to like The Beatles," he says. "He always liked them. I still listen to other songs, but they are the best. There will never be another band like them."

As for school, he enjoys math and accounting, but is not sure where his talents will lead him.

"I'd like to be a rock star or a soccer pro, but those are just dreams," he says. "In reality, I don't know."

However, the Fenelon Falls team would not back down. In the last at bat, with the home game advantage, they brought home two runners to win the game.

"One batter walked, then there were a couple of bunts and a base hit," says Warriors Coach Bob MacNaull. "It was just enough to win the game."

"We played pretty well errorless ball. Fenelon is the first place team (in the league) so we expected them to have a strong game. If we play that well again we can probably win. I'm looking forward to another good game."

Guilford defeated

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

The West Guilford women's softball team lost the first game of a semi-final series 9-7, in a hard fought battle against the Minden women.

Minden started off the game in full force, scoring four runs in the first inning, and keeping West Guilford away from home plate.

Neither team managed to score in the second or third innings, and just when West Guilford started to come to life in the fourth, Minden matched them

Drag Lake Regatta fun

By AL FERGUSON

It was the big weekend on Drag Lake for the cottagers and their friends as they got together to take part and watch the Ced Hurd memorial Mile Swim, Swim and Novelty Regatta, and Fun Day.

The Ced Hurd Memorial Swim, (not quite a mile this year), was won for the second time by Kylie Booth (13) with a time of 18 minutes and 42 seconds. For her fine effort Kylie received the plaque and a medallion to remember her victory. Kylie's younger brother Robbie (10) won the youngest swimmer award with a time of 25 minutes and 20 seconds.

George Keemeneer placed second with a time of 25 minutes and 20 seconds.

Fire centre put to the test this summer — and passes

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

With the large number of fires in the region over the last few weeks, firefighters and the Ministry of Natural Resources fire centre have been put to the test.

The fire centre, overlooking Head Lake in Haliburton, was made a regional dispatch in mid-July because of the high fire hazard over the whole region, and the staff has been busy keeping up with the calls. (Last Saturday alone, eight different fire crews were dispatched from the centre, and two detection flights are flown daily.)

The MNR has leased a large helicopter—Helitack 14—from Can-Arc, a Victoria B.C. based company. In addition to flying firefighters to hard-to-reach locations, a bucket attached to the bottom of the machine is capable of dumping 120 gallons of water on a blaze to slow it down, and give the firefighters a chance to set up operations.

"Regionally fires are reported into the (district) base. If they need a helicopter they call our region," says Dave Brown, the fire centre's senior fire technician. "We are up in the air within five minutes heading straight for the fire."

If there is more than one fire in the region that point where they don't expect it to spread any farther) before the burning period (between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.) the next day," says Brown. "The fire slows down at night when the temperature and winds die down. It is more important for the crew to get a good night's sleep and get at it again early. Once it gets dark it is dangerous."

'The fire slows down at night when the temperature and winds are down,' says Senior Fire Technician at the MNR Fire Centre, Dave Brown. 'It is more important for the crew to get a good night's sleep and get at it again early.'

Firefighting hot, dirty work

and around the fire. Someone is constantly running back to the pump, which has been set up in the nearest source of water, to put in more gas, and grab a few soft drinks for the other men.

Sometimes the pump will quit working, which can lead to a setback. Other times the fire will get too close and jump the hose. Pieces of hose can be burned away, and the men will have to back track instead of making progress.

At the end of the day the men will find their way back to camp, and if they have enough energy they may cook themselves something to eat. If not they fall into their sleeping bags and drift off until the next morning. All three crew members sleep in the same tent, and the close confines can cause problems.

"You start getting on each others nerves," says Ohlmann. "You're dirty, tired, and grimy and little things start to work on you. Sometimes the worst thing that can happen is when you get out there and you get stuck. It rains for three days and everything is wet."

In order to get a feeling of cleanliness the men will often carry a shower head with them and use the pump to create a makeshift shower. But the invention won't always work. At the last fire the crew put the pump in a pond, and minnows blocked the intake valve until the pump finally quit. More often than not, a shower is the first thing the men head for when they get home.

While the conditions are rugged, the Ministry does try to make the situations liveable, especially in the food department. A dry kit is provided for the first day which Ohlmann says is "handy when it's late at night. You can just boil water and throw it in". Other meals have to be prepared on the cookstove, and inventiveness often pays off. (Steaming hot pizzas were the reward when the crew made an oven out of aluminium pans.)

"They (the Ministry) get us pretty well everything we want," says Ohlmann.

With so many fires burning in the region over the last two months, the crews have not been given very much time off (two days since June 6), and being away in the bush, they sometimes don't have a spare time to spend with their families.

"A lot of families get worked up about it," says Ohlmann, who adds that his wife has got used to it. "Some of the younger guys were married in the spring and only had one week with their wives before it got busy."

But despite the difficulties of being away from their families, and the work which leaves them dirty and exhausted at the end of a long day, they return. The excitement draws them back.

needs the helicopter, a regional duty officer in Huntsville will decide which blaze is of top priority, based on information he receives from the field. While making his decision he will take many things into consideration, including the value of the property (whether or not any buildings will be destroyed), the direction it is burning, and the types of fuel that are burning. Each fire is different, says Brown.

Once a three-man crew has been dispatched, the crew leader will scout the fire from the air and decide which direction to approach it from. The helicopter will set down as close to the fire and a source of water as possible, and the fire crew will set to work.

Each of the crew members have a specific job to perform—a power pump has to be set up, and hose (which weighs approximately 60 pounds per 400 feet) has to be laid from the pump to the fire.

The first day on the fire is usually the hardest, and the crew will work from the time they are dropped off until it is too dark to see. They are up again the next morning, tackling the blaze again.

"Our ultimate goal is to have the fire held (to the

The majority of the firefighters have taken a forest technician's course at a community college, and each takes an eight-day basic crew member's course from the MNR. There are also courses for the senior crew member (or crew boss) and the crew leader. The courses deal with all aspects of fighting forest fires, and Brown says that safety is stressed.

Auxiliary crews with basic training help out by going in after the MNR crews to make sure the fire is out and "mop up", which "frees up the initial crew for any new starts".

The crew leaders will watch their people for any signs of fatigue, and Brown says if they are getting tired he tries to arrange for at least one day off. Crews from other areas of the region are often brought in so everyone can get a day off. And if they are really busy, Brown has access to crews throughout the province.

When they are not busy fighting forest fires, the crews are going over the equipment—washing, testing and getting it ready for the next time it is needed.

run for run. Two runners came home on each team, making it 6-2 for Minden.

West Guilford took another in the fifth, but Minden scored three. The serious comeback effort began in the sixth with the West Guilford women scoring three, and another in the seventh. But the effort didn't start soon enough.

"We waited too long to rally," says Cheryl Cooper, a team member.

"In the first innings we were cold," says Joan Scott, the West Guilford coach. "Everyone was too uptight. They weren't relaxed. It took us three innings before our bats started working."

The two teams squared off again on Tuesday night in Minden, in the second of the three game series. Results weren't available at press time.

This regatta was no drag

21 minutes and 38 seconds just ahead of Him Fink's 21 minutes 53 seconds.

All the swimmers finished the course and received certificates attesting to their individual times. The event was ably organized by Joan Beall and a willing group of volunteers.

The Drag Lake Association Beach was the site for the swim and Novelty regatta organized by Dave LaFerle. Many races and events, both new and familiar, were enthusiastically participated in and cheered by all who attended. This results are as follows:

5 and Under Swim: Indy Evans, Andrew Massie; 7 to 10 Swim: Robbie Booth, Kendal Kowaluk, Danielle Leeman; 11 to 15 Swim: Erin Morgan, Robbie Booth, Kim Botnick; Ladies' Swim 16 and Over: Marilyn Booth, Sarah Rimmington, Diana Ferguson; Men's Swim 16 and Over: Jim Fink, Jamie Massie, Alan Ferguson; Inner Tube Race Mixed Doubles: Kendal Kowaluk and Kenneth Neimann, Erin Morgan and David Morgan, Kim Botnick and Vanessa DeAngelis; Water Filled Balloon Toss: Kate Morgan and David Morgan, Wendy Massie and Jamie Massie, Laura Wilson and Ron Wilson; Under 15 Tandem Canoe Race: Kim Botnick and Vanessa DeAngelis, Jessica Evans and Robbie Booth, Erin Morgan and David Morgan; Over 15 Mixed Tandem Canoe: Diana and Alan Ferguson, Charlot and Rob Evans, Marion Rimmington and Joe Parkinson.

Special thanks are given to Ron Wilson and his beach-clearing troop for keeping the beach in such great shape.

As always the good weather continued on Sunday for the popular Fun Day. The Fun Day Coordinator, Trish Morgan, and her group of assistants were kept busy handing out the ice-cream, running the events and awarding the prizes.

Special thanks to Camp Illahee for allowing the cottagers to use their playing field again this year.

The results of the Fun Day were:
Sprints: 4 and Under: Indy Evans, Benjamin Totton, Dana Bell; 5-8: Kenneth O'Halloran, Kate Morgan, Jessica Evans; 9-12 Boys: Kent McVean, David Morgan; 9-12 Girls: Kim Botnick, Kelly Daschuk, Erin Morgan; Men over 12: Stan Korolnek, Craig Taylor, Huw Morgan; Women over 12: Karyn Arnold, Susan Bell, Barbara Martin; Balloon Race: Jesse Totton, Rowland Bell, Indy Evans; Three Legged Races: 12 and Under: Kim Botnick/Vanessa DeAngelis, Liz Jones/Kelly

Daschuk, Kate Morgan/Jessica Evans; Men 13 and Over: John Menzies/Wally Butz, Huw Morgan/Craig Taylor, Al Ferguson/Craig Martin; Women 13 and Over: Karyn Arnold/Betty Arnold, Sharon Jones/Aimee Lapp, Barbara Martin/Diana Ferguson.

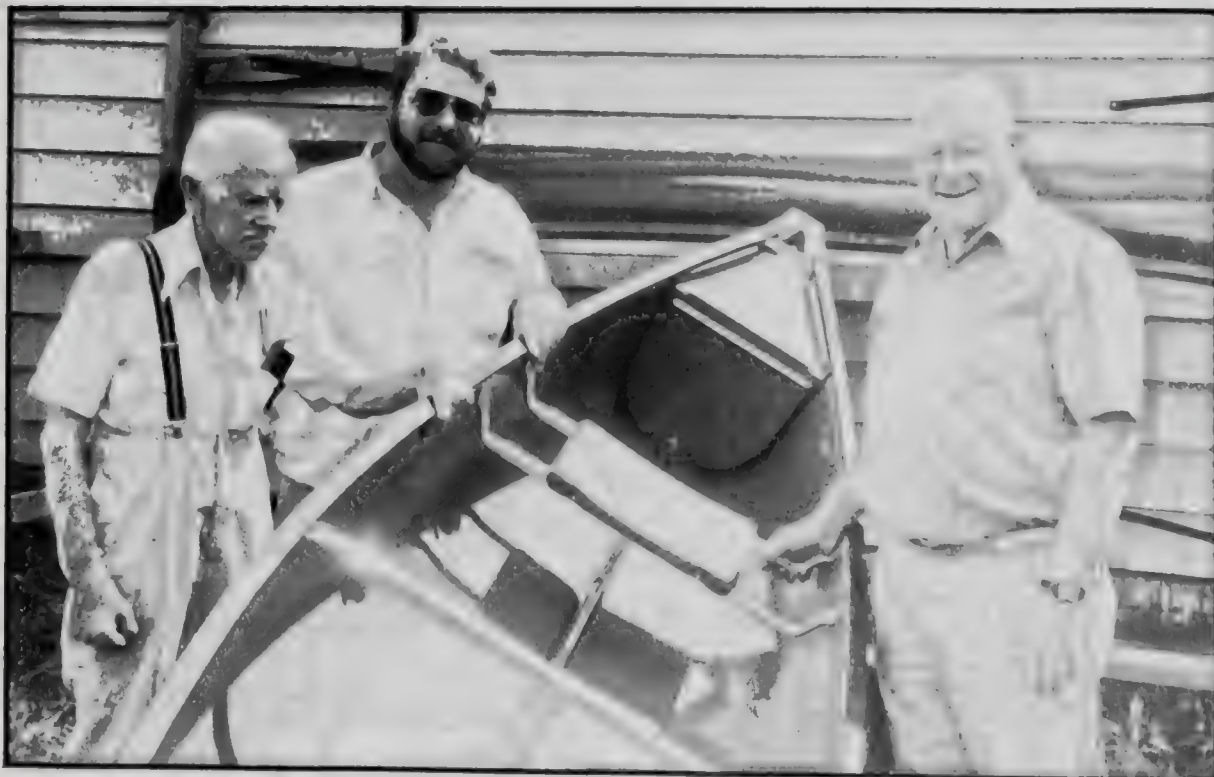

Kick-the-Shoe: 14 and Under: Karyn Arnold, Sue Fink, Liz Jones; 15 and Over: Aimee Lapp, Barbara Martin, Betty Arnold.

Potato Sack Races: 7-9: Kenneth O'Halloran, Jessica Evans, Kate Morgan; 10-14: Vanessa DeAngelis, Kim Botnick, David Morgan; Men over 14: Rob Evans, Doug Lapp, Craig Taylor; Women over 14: Karyn Arnold, Diana Ferguson, Susan Bell.

Baby Bottle Feeding: Lynn Daschuk/Doug Lapp, Diana Menzies/John Menzies, Sharon Jones/Aimee Lapp.

Tug-of-war: In this event, for those under 15, the girls were victorious once more. For the men, those over 40 grunted and wheezed to no avail, for what seemed like hours, as the 40 and unders squeaked out a victory.

Egg Toss: the team of Kim Botnick and Vanessa DeAngelis managed to outlast their opponents for the victory for those under 11. Second were Kate Morgan/Jessica Evans and third were Rowland Bell/David Morgan. In the second event Diana and Al Ferguson tossed their egg for the win, with Dorothea and Wally Butz placing second.

Jack Boughner of Haliburton, who won the canoe draw sponsored by Curry Motors Limited, is seen here with Pat Kennedy of Kennedy Sport and Tackle and Joe Iles of Curry Motors.

Picnicking sun seekers have fun at Kushog Lake

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

While lake dwellers around the county were participating in their annual regattas, the Kushog Lake property owners were enjoying a twist to the usual regatta scene... a picnic.

The lake was well represented at Saturday's event, which featured games for both the children and adults. Santa Claus and his helpers made an early appearance in the decorated boat contest, along with the Loch Kushog Monster.

Children enjoyed their bubble gum prizes after participating in three legged races, balloon popping and cup balancing contests.

The men showed off their skill and brawn in the log sawing competition and horseshoe tournament, and everyone enjoyed the ever popular canoe and swimming races.

To top the day off awards were given out, and hot dogs with the works were eaten, before everyone headed home for a bit of rest after a day of fun and sun.

Even the Loch Kushog Monster decided to drop by for the fun at the Kushog Lake Picnic held near the Twin Rocks Resort on Saturday. Landlubbers found they didn't have to get their feet wet (perhaps only tied to someone else's) to get involved.

Haliburton Carnival '89

Parade just one of many events enjoyed at the Rotary Carnival

One of the most successful Haliburton Rotary Summer carnivals in recent memory drew thousands of people to Haliburton village last Wednesday. The evening began with a waterski show at Head Lake and ended with a dance at the local curling club, but in between, there was plenty of opportunity for some old fashioned summer fun.

The parade, always a highlight of the carnival, was particularly noteworthy this year for the imagination and effort that went into the floats, built around the parade theme of 'The Good Old Days.'

Camp Wanakita's float, replete with a 10 foot dragon, was judged the best in the parade. Home Support Services, Wee Care and the School of Fine Arts placed first, second and third in the best theme competition. First place in the camp category was won by the Haliburton Scout Reserve, with Camp White Pine second and Camp Allsaw third.

Wig-a-Mog's staff danced up a storm to win first prize in the resort category, followed closely by Chateau Woodland and Maple Sands.

Winners in the commercial category were Dafor Kitchens, Color Your World and the West Guilford Shopping Centre, whose float featured L.A. Kings star Bernie Nicholls.

Special awards were presented to the Red Cross, Chace Place, Alan Bagg for his Model T, Kirby Bagg on a bicycle built for two, and the Polish Sausage Clown sponsored by the Butcher Block and Deli.

The person who was probably the happiest with the outcome of the carnival wasn't even in town to see it. Gary Smith of Lindsay was the winner of the Chevrolet Cavalier in the annual carnival car draw. Smith didn't believe his luck when a Rotary Club member telephoned to give him the news, but he was in Haliburton early Saturday morning to drive away his prize. Smith says he'll keep the car for a while at least. "You can't trade your luck" he said.

Overall, the carnival raised more than $20,000 for community service projects assisted by the Rotary Club.

Staying cool on Kennisis Lake a breeze

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

Staying cool in Saturday's hot, humid weather was no problem for residents on Kennisis Lake who participated in the 31st Annual Regatta.

Eager participants gathered at Backwoods Marina and Kennisis Lake Marine to test their skill, and try their luck. Swimming and boating races were a hit among the children and the adults, and an air band competition ("singers" mouth the words to taped songs) featuring some of the more talented on the lake was a definite crowd pleaser.

While some chose to take part in all races, others were content to throw the odd horseshoe, or just sit in the shade of a nearby tree and watch all of the excitement. But young or old, there wasn't a frowning face in the bunch.

The results of the regatta are as follows:

Please turn to page 22

They came by land, by sea, and some even came in costume. And once at Kennisis Lake's 31st Annual Regatta on Saturday, everyone had fun.

Horseshoe Days a smashing success

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

THERE WAS LOTS OF HORSING around in Gooderham on the weekend when area residents celebrated Horseshoe Days with a tug-of-war, hay ride, demolition derby, baseball tournament, flea market, pony rides and, of course, horseshoe throwing.

Sponsored by the Glamorgan Parks and Recreation Committee, headed by chairman Doug Andrews, the event was kicked off when participants kicked up their heels at a dance Friday night where Kim Camoe was voted Miss Horseshoe Days in a beauty contest for 17 year olds and older.

Saturday morning the canoe races were held at Iron Bridge, with some paired paddlers nosing ahead of the rest. That afternoon a beauty contest was held for the under 17-year-olds, with Lacey Trotter winning the prize. Paul McCoubrey won a pie-eating

Midway and fireworks light up Minden sky

MINDEN'S SUMMER ROTARY Carnival ended with a bang last Wednesday when a dazzling display of fireworks lit up the sky, crackled in the air and punctuated an evening of fun.

A midway was in full swing with children's rides and games of chance. Although the midway ran through the night, with flashing lights and sparking noise, quite a few tears were shed by the little ones who were dragged home early for bed.

Most didn't miss out on the magic show, however, where the Garland family pulled a few laughs out of the audience with their tricks. The Winona Street School Brass Quintet and Nighthawk provided the carnival's musical entertainment, and shouts of bingo could be heard upstairs in the community centre.

Remembering the last hug of a departed friend

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by Marian Donovan

Just last week I dropped in for visit to Haliburton Hospital, where as I reported in my last column, my dear friend Irja Soper was ill. Little did I know it was to be our last hug. Irja is gone. What was supposed to be a stomach complaint deteriorated suddenly to gangrene. For myself and all who knew Irja, our prayers and love are extended to Sulo, Irja's husband who is left to mourn and to Irja's daughter who is flying from Australia to be with Sulo at this sad time. In respect to Irja's wishes, there are to be no floral tributes, just a small private memorial service held at the Orange Hall in Haliburton, on Sunday August 12, at 11:30 AM.

For Sulo, I offer the prayer of St. Francis. Life must go on so I have the eulogy scores for Monday night at Hyland Grove. High man was Joe Babiarz and high lady Ida Holmes. Most lone hands went to Garf Hogan and Doris Hogan and the low scores to Kaye Heaton and Herb Moore. The travellers prize was held by Fay Watson.

Bridge at Tory Hill on Tuesday night had a better turnout this week with all prizes being awarded. First place went to Ross Agnew of Wilberforce. Second and third were won by Nick and Maria Lehoczy of Eagle Lake. The consolation went to Vi Aikman of Haliburton. Gwen (Queenie) Taylor of Gooderham, will be undergoing surgery soon for a cataract. All the bridge players and myself wish Queenie all the best. Look out you first place winners when Queenie can see the cards better.

I have my niece Fiona visiting from England, our grandson Jimmy from Toronto and am expecting my sister Pat and her husband Ed, also from England next week. So it has been some busy time this year for yours truly. If my columns are sparse, I really do have an excuse.

All invited to wedding dance

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by Eleanor Cooper

On July 29, Delaine and Lyle Sawyer and family, Carmen and Curtis, attended Delaine's parents' 35th anniversary at the town hall in Newcastle. Some of the guests from the locality included Katie Stamp, Cliff and Wilma Barry, Lloyd and Marion Barry, and Briar Coneybeare. Congratulations to Ross and Joan Stamp on this occasion. The honoured guests were surprised and happy to greet the 200 guests who wished them well on their special day.

The Nicholls family invites you to the wedding dance for their son David and his bride, Melanie on Saturday evening at the Centre.

It was wonderful to read Martha Perkins' story about Bernie last week. it makes all the more justifiable the pride we share in Bernie's progress and accomplishments in the hockey world.

This past weekend was the Andy Sisson family reunion. Amongst those home for the annual occasion were: Claude and Wynn Woodcock, their son, Doug and Pat Woods. Byron and Sylvia from Elliot Lake with their sons Andy and Michael, Bernard, Joyce, Lynn and Craig Sisson, and Brenda Gibbon of Toronto. The gathering place was Ron and Erna Sisson's for most of the weekend. From Hamilton Doug, Carla, and Dylon Brice also joined the reunion. Other relatives included Ellis Smyth, Ken and Maisie Sheridan.

Andy Cooper was home from Laval University in Quebec. After this week he will return to Royal Roads in Victoria.

For those of you who were interested and kind enough to inquire about my father's health, Neilson Owens is home and recovering nicely from the heart attack suffered while he and Thelma were on the Alaska Cruise. He commends the Ketchikan Hospital Alaska for their excellent care.

Welcome at least, to Iris Freeman's niece Shirley and her husband, Bruce Johnston (one of Marion's sons) who have moved with their family, Daren and Teresa, to the shore of Grass Lake. It's welcome home of course to Bruce who grew up here as was a pupil at S.S. 2 and 3 Guilford when I was teaching there. He is in business with his brother, Raymond of Carnarvon.

From the Orillia Packet & Times — Friday, August 4, 1989

Former officer dies.

Retired police officer Charles Beverley (Bud) Robinson died Wednesday, August 2 at Soldiers' Memorial Hospital, Orillia. He was 60.

A former chief of the Beaverton police and a constable for seven years with city police, Robinson was well-liked and respected throughout his career.

"He was an excellent officer and a well-liked man," Chief Ken Boyd said.

Robinson's policing career started in the Toronto area in the 1950's, moved to Beaverton and then to Orillia. He was a constable with the city force from February, 1967 to April 1974, when he resigned from policing altogether.

"He was cut from the old cloth of policing. He was dependable. If the chips were down, he was there. In a tight spot, he is the guy you would have wanted with you," Boyd said.

Boyd said Robinson had a great knowledge of the policing business as well as an easy-going, friendly personality which made him a favourite among fellow officers.

"We were sorry to lose him at the time he resigned," Boyd said. "When I was a supervisor he was in my platoon and he was just an excellent officer."

Funeral services for Robinson were held on Saturday at 2:00 p.m. in the Chapel at the Mundell Funeral Home, 77 West St. N., Orillia. Cremation.

contest for inhaling a banana cream dessert, and a young boy known only as Wesley won the lip synch contest. About 450 people danced to the Moonshiners on Saturday night.

Pastor Brian Williamson of the Gooderham Pentacostal Church organized several children's games over the weekend, and Pat Taylor ran the popular dunk tank from morning until night.

The demolition derby helped make Sunday a smashing success with durable drivers in crazy-coloured cars trying to put each other out of commission.

And a few had some pull and used their muscle in the tug-of-war, held during breaks in between heats of the derby. The following are results of the various events:

TUG-OF-WAR: Men's Team—Highland Creek won for the third year straight over Gooderham and Stormy Lake. Women's Teams—Gooderham won over Stormy Lake.

HORSESHOE TOURNAMENT: Doubles—First, Roy James and Reg McGrath; Second, Harvey

Roberts and Dan Boucher; Third, Don Troop and Ron Barr; Fourth, Lorn Norton and Rick Rowe. Doubles Consolation Round—First, Barry and Bill McLeod; Second, Bill and William Coventry; Third, Brian Smith and Bill Peal.

Singles—First, Mike Stevenson; Second, Roy James; Third, Ron Barr. Forty-six people registered for the event, and 40 played.

BASEBALL TOURNAMENT: Irondale Whisky Jacks over Gooderham, 13-9; Irondale Steelhawks over Harcourt, 11-3; Lochlin over Minden, 10-2; Minden over Gooderham, 13-9; Irondale Whisky Jacks over Snowdon, 6-5.

Consolation Championships: Minden over Harcourt, 12-4. A-Championships: Irondale Whisky Jacks over the Irondale Steelhawks, 3-1.

DEMOLITION DERBY: Feature—First, Steve Woodward; Second, Jeff Hunter. Powder Puff—First, Heather Johnstone; Second, Kim Cadeaux. Free-for-all—Gary Sayers. Best-looking car—Kevin Marritt.

CANOE RACES: First, Gary Lynas and Jim Davidson; Second, Norm Wheeler and Fred Reed; Third, Tim Winder and Dave Blakeley.

Countdown has started for Bluegrass Festival

LEGION NEWS

by Mabel Brannigan

With recreational vehicles ready to move in to Glebe Park, and heavy requests for bookings and information still pouring in, the countdown has started for Legion Bluegrass Festival '89. You have requested many old favourites such as The Taylor Family, Whitewater Bluegrass, Step in Time Cloggers, and of course, our very favourite The Cindy Thompson Show, and we are happy to report that these and other top Canadian performers will be here. But, in addition, some of the best American Bluegrass talent such as The New Coon Creek and Appalachian Express, will provide the lively and colourful entertainment to make this one of the best Bluegrass shows in North America. Several Souvenir and food booths will be available including a food booth by our Ladies Auxiliary.

If interest warrants in, on August 19, a bus will be going from the Branch to the C.N.E. with veterans and other members to participate in Warriors Day. Please sign up in the clubroom if you wish to go.

The Haliburton Legion Pipe Band, one of our greatest public relations assets, has been extremely popular attending engagements in Barrie, Huntsville, and other out of town places, which will include the Haliburton County Fair to be held in the Minden fairgrounds. Also, they are booked for the Kinmount Fair on September 2. Colour parties and marching units are requested to attend with that band at both Minden and Kinmount. Also, the band will celebrate the opening of Legion Week with a church parade on September 17 from our Branch, and they will perform at the District Drumhead service in Bancroft on September 24 when Legion Week concludes.

At the July meeting, your Executive passed a resolution to make several charitable donations including substantial amounts to Club 35 and to the Haliburton-Victoria Children's Camp.

In addition to the Red Cross Blood Donor's Clinic sponsored by the Red Cross Society, with free facilities provided by Branch 129, our Executive has passed a motion that Branch 129 will now be the full sponsor of an additional blood donors' clinic. Comrade Jack Bassett has agreed to chair this clinic which is expected to be held in October. The Ladies Auxiliary have already offered assistance.

The inspiring painting now placed on the stagewall in the club room was donated by Owen Burman and Gerald Irish. The members are very appreciative of this kind act.

We remind our members of the next general meeting on Thursday, September 7, at which time you will be asked to vote for or against a motion to continue the Bluegrass festivals into the future.

point that, yes, I love say hello and recognize new people in the area in this column. Unfortunately, I cannot be there when you arrive. I know of you only if I hear someone telling me that you have moved in, or if you give me a call. I seem to have my own circle of activity and interests and unless you happen to join that little sphere I am unlikely to know of you. Please call 754-2278 or 2388 if you have news you would like to see included.

Keep asking your friends to attend the R.D. Lawrence evening at Kennisis on August 19th. It will give us an insight into questions about particular ecology and environment. The forum will be an important step in developing further awareness about the lakes, rivers and woods of our area. 754-2198 is the number to call for further information. It's in our best interests to protect our natural environment.

Miriam Clancy has been a visitor at Joy and Richard Fielding's.

Dan Mawbey (Bev Sisson's brother) and Linda, both of Canadian Armed Forces, will be married at St. George's Church on August 26.

Mildred Cooper and her sister and brother-in-law, Ruth and Fred Jones, were guests last week at Greg Cooper's. They also visited Elva Cooper on their way home.

SENIOR LEAGUE

By
WINNIFRED BARNUM
Hello Senior League readers. The ladies and gentlemen from Kennis Lake came and served our Thursday Tea Party in the auditorium. A lady and gentleman entertained us with piano and trumpet music. Since it was a birthday tea party, each July birthday person had a decorated cupcake with a candle in the centre. July birthdays were Pearl Lyle, Lillian James, Caroline Jones and Isabella Gardner.

Thursday night we had bingo with Tom McAllister calling for us. Thanks for coming.

Friday Doris and Linda took a bus load of residents to Bobcaygeon for the Step Dancing and Fiddle Competitions. Mark Schell and his staff packed a lovely lunch for us and we ate it on the bus, by the river. Thank you Mark and staff. We really enjoyed it.

After our lunch we went into the Community Centre where the Step Dancing and Fiddle competition was held, for the children under 8 years and then under 12 years. They were then presented with awards and/or money.

Before the adult competitions, Graham Townsend played the violin. He is renowned around the world for his playing. We enjoyed it very much.

On behalf of the residents, I wish to thank the volunteers who accompanied us and gave such help serving the lunch and all: Sylvia and Dick Thompson, Bob and Dorothy Milne and Jean Robson. Of course, we must not forget Linda and Doris.

Sunday Mable Buttery and Mr. and Mrs. Ron Newbatt and son Ryan to visit; and Monday she had her sister Ruth and husband Gordon Kellett to visit her.

Tuesday morning service was conducted by Rev. B. Parker, Minden Anglican church.

In the afternoon Linda and Doris took us on the bus to Donald to see where the tornado had lifted trees out of the ground, roots and all — all around a house and didn't damage the house. You can hardly believe it unless you see it.

Evert Fearrey, his daughter Terri-Lynn and Stace Walker came to sing for us on Tuesday night. We sincerely thank them.

Pearl Lyle's grandson Derek Hewitt came and took her to Jean's for lunch Tuesday. Wednesday, for lunch we had hamburgers, hot dogs and ice cream cones in the auditorium.

We have a new resident, Myrtle O'Halloran, Welcome to Hyland Crest.

My sister May, her husband Roy and Jacqueline took me to the Haliburton Carnival Wednesday and Terry brought me home.

HISTORIC EVENT FOR HALIBURTON'S ANGLICAN COMMUNITY.

In 1839 the Anglican Diocese of Toronto was first established. To mark this 150th. (Sequentennial) anniversary year, a commemorative wooden cross is passing through every church in the diocese. The "Sequentennial Cross" will arrive in Haliburton on Thursday, August 10th. At 6:30 PM it will be carried in a colourful Procession, led by Choir in "period costume" singing hymns of the 1800's. From the Rotary Beach, the Procession will make its way across Head Lake Park to the Government Dock, and up to St. George's Church. (In case of rain, the event begins at St. George's at 6:30 PM) There, an Anniversary Evensong at 7 PM will be followed by light refreshments. The whole community is invited to the park and to the church to share in this historic day in the life of the Anglican Church in Haliburton. "Period costume", where possible, would be appreciated.
